all those who will be glad to avail them-

McDOUGALL'S MUSINGS

Eliot Lays War to Lust of Empire by Germany

The above is the heading of a three-column article by Professor Eliot in the Boston Herald of the 17th of this month. Eliot is a good German scholar and for years has associated with German professors at Harvard. Eliot was the man sent by Carnegie on a peace or disarmament mission to every country in the world, a few years ago, and what he says about the present state of Europe is not at second hand.

As I two weeks ago took Bernhardt and his egotistical German culture for my text, and last week spoke of what British statesmen said about the war at the Lord Mayor's banquet, I now speak about what one of the great American scholars says, and have read and reread the article I refer to and although I differ from the learned professor when he says that his church has no devil, yet I agree with him in almost all he says about the present "abomination of desolation" in Europe. Any extracts from this letter of Eliot's in the Herald would fail to give the correct sense, as it is a logical, carefully-written essay. Speaking of the big German army Eliot says: "At the word of the emperor this army can be summoned, collected, clothed, equipped and armed, and set in motion toward any frontier in a day. The German army was thus made the largest in proportion to population, the best equipped and the most mobile in the world." Speaking of the German navy I quote as follows:

"The intense desire for colonies and for the spread of German commerce throughout the world instigated the creation of a great German navy and started the race with England in navy building. The increase of German wealth and the rapid development of manufactures and commercial sea power after 1870-71 made it possible for the empire to devote immense sums of money to the quick construction of a powerful navy in which the experience and skill of all other shipbuilding nations would be appropriated and improved on."

I hope that these extracts from this great letter of Eliot's will whet the appetite for getting the whole of it. School men generally don't understand politics, but Professor Eliot knows Latin and Greek and also politics and human nature.

Having noticed the German side and the British side, and now, in a representative American, the American view of this dreadful war, I intend next week to speak of a pamphlet written by a friend of mine who was ten years in Berlin as the London Times correspondent there and who rode alongside the Kaiser at the annual autumn reviews and dined with him. I have not yet seen this little book or pamphlet, but they have ordered for the book-stalls a hundred thousand copies.

This war puts me in mind of the old Scotch lady who said she was tired of the silly conversation of the day, which, after a few remarks about the weather, drifted into talking about who were dead and who were bred and who were brought to bed, and that in her young days they had splendid elopements and Greta Green marriages and duels and scandals worth while to talk about. So this war has given all the gossips something to talk about.

We are just beginning to realize the effects of the war in this country, and it is felt from Andover to San Francisco, and yet an otherwise intelligent man told me when the war began in August that this republican country would not be affected by the stupidity of the Kaiser or any other war lord in Europe.

Just think of our three best customers, Germany, France and England, making themselves bankrupt. We glory in our big exports and rejoice in our small imports. If our three largest buyers are in difficulties it stands to reason that we must feel the effects of the war.

I have today a letter from a friend in New York. He says since August Wall Street is dead and "I may as well be in bed as my occupation in gone." A few days ago I had a letter from a friend in Nova Scotia who is interested in the coal trade. He says the bottom seems "to have dropped out of our business, but we have oatmeal and potatoes and will not starve!"

PLYMOUTH

Cyril Maude and "Grumpy" have captured Boston. The distinguished English actor is repeating his great New York and London successes and judging from present indications "Grumpy" is due for a long stay at the Eliot Street playhouse. On next Monday the piece enters upon the fourth week of its engagement and the only noticeable change since its opening is that it has increased in popularity. Mr. Maude is supported by an excellent English company that includes Elsie MacKay, a very talented and beautiful actress. Miss MacKay appears in the role created by the star's daughter, Margery, last season. In short, the engagement of Mr. Maude and "Grumpy" is not only the most notable event of the season but in truth the biggest theatrical treat in years. It is wise for you not to deprive yourself of this pleasure. Seats are selling for three weeks in advance and as usual the most careful attention is paid to all mail orders when accompanied by remittance payable to Fred E. Wright. The regular Thursday and Saturday matinees prevail.

MAJESTIC

Not in many seasons has our stage been graced with so attractive and successful a romantic drama as "Omar, the Tentmaker," the spectacular Persian love-play in which Guy Bates Post will inaugurate a limited engagement at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, beginning Monday evening, November 30th, with bargain matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

The play relates the engrossing love-life of one of the most engaging characters in the world's history, Omar Khayyam, the merry-souled Persian poet and mystic of the eleventh century.

"Omar, the Tentmaker," is from the gifted pen of Richard Walton Tully, and has scored a much more popular success than did his preceding works, "The Bird of Paradise" and "The Rose of the Rancho." Mr. Tully succeeded in bringing to the fore all the captivating and lovable qualities in Omar's nature without in the least slighting his humanity, and the tale he has woven around the poet is swift-moving and constantly enthralling. At the Wednesday and Saturday matinees the best seats are $1.00, and good orchestra seats may be obtained evenings for $1.00.

HOLLIS STREET

The noted actress, Margaret Anglin, presented an artistic revival of Oscar Wilde's brilliant play, "Lady Windermere's Fan," at the Hollis Street theatre on Monday night, before an audience that packed the spacious playhouse to its capacity. The engagement is for two weeks only, and there is every indication that the box office returns will break the present season's records. In Miss Anglin is centered one of the chief hopes of the women of the American stage. She has demonstrated again and again her remarkable talents in a wide range of characters, and in the sphere of emotional acting she stands without a peeress. In a single gesture Miss Anglin is able to convey all that in an ordinary artist would be lost. In "Lady Windermere's Fan"—in the role of the worldly Mrs. Elynor—she simply does on the stage what the brilliant author had in his mind when he fervidly wrote the lines and painted the situations. Do not miss seeing Margaret Anglin in "Lady Windermere's Fan." The engagement will terminate on Saturday, December 5. Mail orders for seats will receive prompt attention.

Movie Actors' Ball

Don't talk war!

It's poor judgment and only leads to emphasize its horrors. For war is all that Sherman said. If you must discuss events talk about the movie ball. It's the biggest thing yet, and thousands of motion picture lovers are anxiously awaiting for next Wednesday night, December 2, the date set for the second annual ball of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Massachusetts which will be given at the Boston Arena. The committee headed by S. Grant have arranged an attractive program that includes many novel features. Here is the best chance for you to meet and dance with your favorite movie star. Other features include a mammoth dancing contest for cups donated by well-known picture stars. The program will offer a list of high-class vaudeville. Remember that the ball is open to the entire public. Of course it's a number of tickets to be sold in lots and unless you get busy you will lose the opportunity of witnessing one real good time. Tickets can be obtained at all the leading vaudeville and picture houses.

Was of the Harvard Class of 1904

George French Roberts, who died Sunday at his mother's home in Milton, was born in Boston, July 26, 1881, the son of Rachel H. (Richardson) Roberts and the late George French Roberts. After attending Milton Academy and Volkman School, he entered Harvard with the class of '04. For several years after his graduation he was in the office of William A. Read & Co., and later entered the employ of Pilling & Madeley, manufacturers of Philadelphia, from which post he recently resigned. Lately he had been in the commission business in Boston. He was unmarried and had always made his home with his mother in Milton. He is survived also by a sister, Mrs. Henry G. Brooks, and a brother, James A. Roberts.

George French Roberts, father of the young man who died November 22, was son of the late James Roberts, who married at twenty-two in Andover Mary Augusta French, in 1846. His eldest daughter, Catherine, after the death of her parents came back to live near her old home on Abbot street, choosing a site for her beautiful house near the old friends here. James had one sister well known to many of the elders, Harriet, the wife of the late George L. Davis of the North Parish, who were married here in 1841. They were children of James, who died here in 1830—seventh in the long line from Governor Thomas Roberts, the pioneer of the old Piscataqua plantation of Dover, etc., who died there in 1673. This youngest man was tenth in direct line from the first to come to New England. The elder James had a brother who came here with him from Rochester, N. H., who married Mary Ann Harding in 1818, sister of the late John Harding, and unlike many Western families, this one kept in touch with us here and we know of the large and successful tribe of this migration and its fine pioneer work way out to the Pacific coast for three generations. One of the tenth in that group made an hour's call while East last summer on a business trip, upon his cousin, Mrs. Hannah (Harding) Flint of High street, looking at what he could see of the early home here of his grandparents with eager interest. C. H. A.

Guild Notes

This afternoon the members of the Friendship Club were entertained by Miss Twichell.

The K. T. club will go to Lawrence tomorrow afternoon to visit the group of children at the Y. W. C. A. Institute for whom the scrap-books are to be made. A visit to the Y. W. C. A. is also planned.

A basketball game between the Guild and the Lawrence Y. M. C. A. second teams is booked for tomorrow night in the gymnasium.

Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, Douglas Crawford will speak to the senior members of the Guild, both boys and girls. This is to be a Thanksgiving service and members may invite their friends. A cordial welcome is extended to all.

Last Tuesday night the basketball club very pleasantly surprised Mrs. French by presenting her with a dainty birthday-cake with seven candles on it for good luck.

Letters to "Santa Claus"

The following notice regarding the letters addressed to "Santa Claus" is timely at this season of the year when so many requests from the little folks go astray because there is no place to send them.

Office of Fourth Asst. P. M. Gen., Washington, Nov. 7, 1914.
The attention of postmasters is called to the Postmaster General's Order No. 7670, of November 19, 1913, amending Section 594 of the Postal Laws and Regulations by the addition of a paragraph which reads as follows:

3. Postmasters are authorized to deliver all letters on which the postage has been fully prepaid arriving at their respective post offices during the month of December of each year, which are addressed plainly and unmistakably to "Santa Claus," without any other terms or expressions identifying the person for whom such letters are intended, to responsible charitable institutions or reputable individuals in the town or city of address who may desire to use them exclusively for philanthropic purposes. Letters of the character described addressed for local delivery, on which the postage is wholly unpaid, or paid less than one full rate, also may be delivered to such institutions or individuals upon the payment of the postage with which they are chargeable. In the event that these letters are requested by more than one institution or individual, the postmaster shall distribute them in such proportion as he may deem proper. Food Sale at the Grange

A very successful food sale was held at the Grange hall on Tuesday evening after the regular session of the order. The tables were loaded with good things and on the stage was a fine array of fruit and vegetables in bulk. The food sold well, the low prices making of it an advantageous time to put in a supply of home cooking, which was so appetizing in its appearance. Ice cream and cake were also for sale.

All articles left were auctioned off by E. W. Burt and much merriment was caused by the bidding. Cabbages seemed to be the rage among the young ladies who vied with each other to purchase these succulent vegetables. One young man laid in a winter's supply of carrots at a ridiculously low figure and it is expected his complexion will be much improved by spring.

Dancing followed the auction in which all participated with much enjoyment. Mrs. George Averill and Mrs. Fred Swanton had charge of the cake table; Mrs. Warren Moorar and Mrs. Ira Hill, of the canned fruit; and Mrs. Hubert Mayo and Miss Gladys Hill of the candy.

Eat More Fish

An agitation begun by the writer upon his assumption of his new duties as chairman of the Boston Industrial Development Board, in the interest of developing the use of fish as a food, is bearing excellent fruit in the work of the new directors of the Port of Boston. The Commonwealth spent a very large sum of money developing a new fish pier in Boston that should in turn improve the business of marketing fish as a food product for all New England. This development has been very inadequate inasmuch as it failed to make any provisions for giving satisfactory service in the distribution of the fish after it was taken from the vessels to the pier.

The problem of creating such factors in transportation as shall remedy this difficulty is one in which great interest is being taken at the present time by influences in Boston associated with this form of work. To make the public know more about the value of fish as a food, the present Board of Port Directors under the direction of Edward F. McSweeney, is rendering a splendid service by an assumption of this burden. Mr. McSweeney is peculiarly well qualified for working out such a problem, as proven by the very excellent service he rendered in connection with the investigation of the high cost of living made by a Massachusetts commission several years ago. Some points in the recent bulletin issued under the direction of Chairman McSweeney are of very great interest at this time when all other foodstuffs represent such a high cost to the consuming public.

The Bulletin says:

If the housewife buys a pound of smoked ham at 22c, she gets 16 per cent of protein, but if she buys a pound of haddock at 7c she gets 18 per cent of protein; with a pound of pork chops at 25c, she gets 17 per cent of protein and with a pound of herring at 8c, 19 per cent of protein; sirloin at 30c gives her 19 per cent protein, while bluefish at 10c gives an equal amount of protein, and so on through the list. When a pound of fish at 10c gives the same amount of protein as a pound of meat at 30c, the eastcoast housewife who does not take advantage of this great saving in money should not complain of the cost of living.

When the housekeeper knows and realizes that fish combined with bread, potatoes and other vegetables can be counted on to supply the demands of the human body as well as meat, there will be a larger demand on the part of the fish supply. Not only is there a plentiful supply of fish to supply this demand, but the eastern coast market carries the following "staple varieties," the year around:—bluefish, cod, flounders, haddock, hake, porgies or scup, halibut, herring, mackerel, pollock, whiting (silver hake), western salmon, sea bass, smelts, shad, weakfish. And even this long list does not include all the fish sold for food in our markets. At all times fish can be purchased at this port from 10c to 12c per pound while meat costs at least on an average of from 20c to 30c per pound.

Through habit and custom, fish at present has a place on our tables only once or twice a week, and as a result there is a woeful lack of knowledge in the United States as to the proper way of cooking and preparing fish for the table. The sauces which add flavor and piquancy, and the many accessory dishes such as salads, croquettes, pates, etc., are seldom considered with regard to fish in this country. With an increased use of fish will come better knowledge of the correct way to prepare and cook fish. The foreign-born population of the United States are in fact the real fish consumers of the country. They have brought their fish-eating habits with them from Europe, where fish, not meat, is the more common nitrogenous food; and they are accustomed to make an appetizing and satisfying meal of fish. We in the United States have done comparatively little to stimulate our fisheries, while the older nations have expended every effort to gather the crops that the waters yield so abundantly, and deliver them cheaply and in prime condition to their people, not only along the coast, but to extreme inland towns.

The average meat consumption of the individual in the United States has long been declining. Seventy-five years ago, one half of the national diet was meat, while five years ago (1910) it had dwindled to one-third, a decline of 16.6 per cent, due undoubtedly to the increased price of meat which had risen between 1897 and 1910 over 37 per cent. Yet with all the decline in the consumption of meat, the percentage spent for beef by the average Massachusetts family today is still higher than that spent for any other article of food, the expenditures of the housewife for meats being two-fifths of the total amount spent for all foodstuffs. Fish on the other hand has not increased in price over a quarter or a half a cent a pound in ten years, but the average family has not taken advantage of this low price for a nourishing food, for only 5.3 per cent of the total expense for all foodstuffs went for fish. And all these out-of-proportion expenditures with fish containing much more nourishment than meat and purchasable at from one-third to one-half the cost!

A Growing Organization

The extended program announcing the work of the Barnstormers for the coming season will attract the interest of a wide circle of Andover people. The organization has succeeded in not alone creating a club of clever amateur actors, who have improved by the experience they have had in the different plays presented, and who have passed on to associates in minor parts, enthusiasm and interest in things worth while, but it has aroused an interest in the same things among all those who have been auditors at the different plays. Marked improvement has been noted from year to year in the character of the performances and there has been a tendency by those in control to aspire to more pretentious undertakings.

The "Barnstormers" organization is a good thing for Andover, and it is well worth while for the town at large to have a sympathy with the ambitions, which direct and lead to a number of very pretentious plans, of those who are active in this organization. The "little playhouse" which has become a reality in many communities, where the early beginnings were similar to the beginning of the Barnstormers, suggest what may be possible for Andover if continued development can be realized in this particular line of activity. This may be a long way off, but meanwhile the genuine and valuable service to those who are active participants, and to those who enjoy the plays presented, demands the heartiest support of all people who like to see a community like Andover go ahead along the right lines.

Editorial Cinder

Punchard had better success with Exeter than did the bigger institution on the hill this year, and the local high school boys all deserve the very heartiest praise for the remarkably successful season which they have had in this branch of sport. The high school game with Exeter was one of the best exhibitions that we have had in town during the season, and while there isn't much probability that Punchard can ever progress to that point where they will be the natural competitors of the students of the bigger institution, they have certainly shown a class for a high school team during the past season, marking better organization, better training and better material than has been noted at Punchard for a good many years. Let us hope that it has been one of the sports for the high school boys which through helping in making the sound body, has developed the much-desired sound mind.

"The Amateurs" who are to present the comedy, "Mrs. Bumpstead Leigh" on December 12th, is a dramatic club of experienced amateurs from Boston and Brookline, which was formed in 1907 and is this fall starting its eighth season.

The purpose of the club is expressed in its by-laws as follows: "to give amateur performances of plays of literary and dramatic merit," and its membership is composed of active and assisting members who take part in the production of the plays, and the associate members who attend the performances.

The officers at present are: Burton R. Miller, president; Timothy W. Sprague, vice-president; Herbert M. Leland, secretary-treasurer; and the directors are: Mrs. Frederic H. Briggs, Geo. Royal Pulsifer, W. Graydon Stetson and Richard F. Fuller, together with the three officers ex officio.

The club has endeavored to maintain a high standard in its productions, and as far as possible to give plays which have not been previously performed by amateur clubs around Boston. Among some of the most successful in the past have been "Candida" and "Man and Superman," "You Never Can Tell," and "How He Lied to Her Husband" by Bernard Shaw; "The Honeymoon" and "The Stepmother" by Arnold Bennett; and such plays as "The Squire of Dames," "The Greatest Thing in the World," "Green Stockings," "The Climax," "Her Great Match," "Divorçons," and "The Importance of Being Earnest." Recently at a dinner and gathering of their active and assisting members, Shaw's play of "Androcles and the Lion" was informally presented, with a great deal of enjoyment to all concerned.

They give three performances each year in Whitney Hall, Brookline.

If the above program seems interesting to you and you desire to become a Barnstormer, simply notify Miss Agnes Park, Secretary, Main street, or Arthur G. Clark, Treasurer, Main street.

WEDDINGS

CARNEY—SULLIVAN

Miss Margaret Sullivan of Howerth court and John Carney of Methuen were married at St. Augustine's church by the Rev. William Donovan on Wednesday afternoon. The bride was attended by Miss Annie Sheehan, while Eugene Carney, brother of the groom, was best man. In the evening a reception was held at the bride's home where about forty relatives and friends sat down to a turkey dinner.

The couple received many beautiful and useful presents, including a china tea set from the bride's former workmates. Mr. and Mrs. Carney will reside in Lawrence.

WALDIE—SMITH

The marriage of James Waldie, son of Mrs. Georgina Waldie, and Miss Agnes Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Smith, took place on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Smith on Maple avenue. It was a quiet wedding, only the immediate families witnessing the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Frederick A. Wilson of the Free church. Mr. and Mrs. Waldie will reside at 12 Maple avenue.

NICOLL—CALDWELL

A pretty home wedding took place on Wednesday evening when Miss Agnes Caldwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Caldwell, became the bride of George Nicoll, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Nicoll of Cuba street.

The marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents on Whittier street, and was attended by about fifty relatives and friends of the young couple. Rev. Frederick A. Wilson of the Free church performed the ceremony, the single ring service being used.

Miss Lena Lundgren played the wedding march, and the couple with their attendants entered the parlor and stood under a white wedding bell, which opened when they were pronounced husband and wife and showered them with confetti. The house was effectively trimmed with evergreen, palms and cut flowers.

The bride was charming in a white voile dress trimmed with fur and wearing a wedding veil. She carried a beautiful bouquet of white chrysanthemums. Her attendant was Miss Minnie Caldwell and she wore white voile with a lace overdress and carried white and pink carnations. Alexander Carnathan was best man.

After the ceremony the guests sat down to a bountiful turkey supper, all joining in wishing the bride and her husband long life and much happiness. An array of beautiful wedding presents testified to the esteem in which the young people are held. After a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Nicoll will take up their residence on Cuba street.

Retire After Long Service

William C. Coutts of Maple avenue and James Soutar of Chestnut street have retired from service with the Smith & Dove Manufacturing Company after many years of faithful and efficient service. They have been placed on the pension list by their former employers, and their retirement in this way carries out a policy adopted by the company a few years ago and which is now enjoyed by several of their long-time employees.

Both men have been with the Smith & Dove Company over forty-two years, Mr. Coutts surpassing that mark by six months, while Mr. Soutar has been an employee three months longer. The former served two years in the hocking department, being then transferred to the spinning department where he became overseer, serving in that capacity for twenty years. He was then placed at the head of the flax-preparing department where he served for twenty years more.

Mr. Soutar started his career with the Smith & Dove Company at their old mill in Frye Village. After working in a minor capacity for some time he was later placed in charge of the balling and winding department and from Frye Village he came to the new mill in Abbott Village to take up similar duties. For the last few years he has been employed in the newest addition to the factory, and his retirement comes after unusually loyal service to his employers.

At the closing hour of work in the flax-preparing department on Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Coutts was tendered a farewell reception by those who have worked under him, and Miss Isabel McIntosh, an employee of many years, in behalf of her room-mates presented him with a beautiful meerschaum pipe and jar of tobacco. Mr. Coutts responded feelingly and expressed the wish that their new overseer receive the same loyal and enthusiastic support that had been given him, and assured them that with continued cooperation their work would be appreciated by the owners of the mill as it had in the past. The gathering broke up after three hearty cheers for the retiring overseer.

Silver Wedding Observed

Over 50 friends of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Currier gathered at their home on Maple avenue last Friday evening for the purpose of assisting them in celebrating the 25th anniversary of their wedding. The occasion was in the form of a surprise party and both Mr. and Mrs. Currier were entirely in the dark as to what was being planned until the host of guests stormed their front door shortly after eight o'clock.

The home of William C. Coutts was planned as the rendezvous for those who had been invited and after being assembled, the march on the house was made led by J. H. Campion and Burton Todd, who carried a fine leather arm chair, the gift of the gathering to Mr. Currier. Although taken completely by surprise Mr. and Mrs. Currier received each guest with a hearty welcome and their appreciation of the event was shown by their cordiality.

Previous to the arrival of the members of the party, a dinner was served by Mr. and Mrs. Currier to a few of their most intimate friends in honor of the occasion, those present being Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Harper and two children of Boston, who always celebrate the anniversary with Mr. and Mrs. Currier. Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Dyer, Mr. and Mrs. Allie Hanscom and Mr. and Mrs. Mark I. Fuller of Lawrence. For the dinner the house and table were prettily decorated with flowers. A large bouquet of pinks and snap dragons, a gift to Mrs. Currier from the Florentia Class of Lawrence, was shown and the table bore beautiful bunches of chrysanthemums. It was while the final course in the dinner was being served that the door bell rang announcing the arrival of the other friends.

Mrs. Currier was not forgotten by those who had the arrangements in charge and she was presented with a beautiful berry spoon. She was the recipient of other gifts from relatives and friends, among the presents received being a cheval mirror, cut glass celery dips and a set of silver hair pins. During the evening dainty refreshments were served and the evening was made merry with songs and instrumental music.

Those who planned the party and carried out the plans successfully were Mrs. J. H. Campion and Mrs. Frank B. Grout.

Mr. and Mrs. Currier were married in Lawrence in 1889 by Rev. Mr. Wallace of the First Baptist church. About twelve years ago they moved to Andover and now live on Maple avenue. Mr. Currier is in the wholesale grocery business in Lawrence, being head of the firm of Currier, Todd Co.

CONFIRMATION AT CHRIST CHURCH

Bishop William E. Lawrence Administers Rite to Large Class and Preaches a Beautiful Sermon to an Attentive Congregation

Last Sunday morning at Christ church Bishop William Lawrence of the diocese of Massachusetts confirmed about twenty-five candidates into the Episcopal faith. The service was a most impressive one, the edifice being filled with worshippers, some from other churches, who had come to hear the bishop preach.

Special music had been arranged by Choirmaster Michelsen for the occasion, the Te Deum being one written by him and dedicated to Christ church. The offertory anthem, "Even Me," was well rendered by the choir boys, the solo part being taken by Alfred Robb.

After the rite of confirmation had been administered, Bishop Lawrence spoke a few words of admonition to the candidates, telling them of the solemnity of the service which dated back to Apostolic times, and counseling them to honor their parish church wherever they were by the lives they would lead in the future. He then ascended the pulpit where he delivered the address of the morning. The sermon proper was prefaced by a few remarks about the rector, in which the bishop spoke of Mr. Henry's worth and what he stood for in the parish. He was to be the servant of his people, not to run their little errands, which they could just as well run themselves, but to be their helper and guide in those things which pertained to their spiritual life. He hoped that their life together would be mutually profitable.

The sermon was delivered by the bishop who took for his text words from St. Mark, 4th chapter, 23rd and 24th verses—"He that hath ears to hear let him hear . . . but take ye heed what ye hear." He spoke in part as follows:

At first glance the words of the text seem rather needless, as everyone equipped with ears has the sense of hearing, if he be normal, but the latter part of the text explains a great deal, "but take ye heed what ye hear." Three friends are up on a hilltop and it seems as though profound silence reigns. One friend turns to another and asks him if he heard that train rumble away off. The other replies in the negative and asks if the first did not hear that dog bark a long way off. He shakes his head and the third interrupts by asking if they did not hear a child cry off in the distance. No, neither one of the other two had heard that sound. They heard, individually, what they had accustomed themselves to hearing. The one who heard the train was probably an engineer, the one who heard the dog bark, a lover of animals, the third who heard the child cry was very likely a mother. Their ears were attuned to the sounds they each had heard.

It is the same in the animal world; the dog picks up his ears at the slightest sound because for centuries his ancestry have had to use their ears to protect themselves from the approach of an enemy.

A young boy gets a taste for foul stories. The taste grows with the growth of the boy and when he comes to young manhood, the other young men of the community in which he lives, flock to him to have their desires for foul stories filled. He is so accustomed to low habits of speech that he says things unthinkingly at times, and this goes on until one day he hears his small son let drop a word that brings him to himself. He tries to stop that little son, but the habit is so strong that he fails in his desire to have his son clean-mouthed, and he realizes with sorrow his terrible mistake.

A girl likewise may form the habit of listening to gossip and scandal until at last she has acquired the taste for those things and the young women who want gossip go to her, all the while calling her a silly old maid.

How the little chaps do worship the strength and dignity of an athlete, and yet how their admiration wanes if that same splendid body stoops to deeds of cruelty or meanness, or if the man is foul-mouthed and evil-spoken.

So the prophets of old listened for the voice of chivalry, so Saul, the persecutor of the Christians, heard a voice from heaven speak to him. The company that were with him saw a light but heard no voice, but Saul heard the voice of warning which changed his whole life. "He that hath ears to hear let him hear—but take heed what ye hear."

We go to the city and the din and roar of the elevated and the subway and the traffic of the city streets fill our ears. We are glad to get home, away from the confusion, and yet above the clash and uproar, we remember the voice of a friend we met in passing, the pleasant voice of one shopgirl as compared with her fellow-workers, or the noisy voice of a street vender who cried his wares.

Above all was one voice, the bishop said, that appealed to him; the voice of the Italian mother, who had left the fair fields and sunny skies of her native land to come here where her children might be "free." She lives, perhaps, with her little ones, over a saloon in the North End, and the children play in the streets instead of in the country. They learn English very quickly, while she knows nothing but her native tongue, and as they grow up they are ashamed of their Old World mother, and a cry goes up from her heart that the people of the city might listen and guide her children in the right paths that she would have them in if she could.

Bishop Lawrence ended his discourse by saying that we will not hear the right sounds if our ears are not attuned for them and that our several characters will determine what we shall hear and to what we shall close our ears.

Exhibit of Portraits

A very interesting exhibition of portraits of well known Andover people was held at the studio of H. Winthrop Peirce on Morton street last Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and many of the townspeople availed themselves of the opportunity to see Mr. Peirce's work.

Besides portraits of his son and daughter, Mr. Peirce had on exhibition likenesses of Melville C. Day, Phillips Academy's greatest benefactor, loaned by the Trustees, Professor William Graves, George H. Torr and Judge C. U. Bell, loaned by the families, Madam Draper, loaned by the trustees of Abbot Academy and one of Joseph A. Smart, loaned by the Merrimack Insurance Company.

The portraits were remarkably fine likenesses of the people which they represented, particular mention being made by all of the pictures of Professor Graves and Madam Draper. The soft backgrounds of the paintings enhanced their charm and the clear cut and sharp outlines of the different subjects brought them out as if in relief. Mr. Day's picture was painted from a collection of photographs, Mr. Peirce never having seen his subject, and it was a remarkable likeness, in its dignity of bearing, to this much honored man.

Mr. Peirce has worked at his chosen profession for more than forty years, and his love of the work shows itself in his creations. His home is charming with beautiful landscapes, bits of color, scenes from places both near and far away, but all dear to him and which he preserves to his memory in this wonderful way.

Thanksgiving Sale at Christ Church

The ladies of Christ church held their annual Thanksgiving sale on Tuesday afternoon and it added another successful item to their long list.

The parish house of the church was decorated with cornstalks, apples and pumpkins being strung along the walls. Yellow and pumpkin colored crepe paper and streamers made the tables attractive and each table had a goodly array of articles and things which make of Thanksgiving a time of cheer.

There were six different tables where the good things could be purchased. At the entrance door stood the fruit and jelly table, presided over by Mrs. Nesbit Gleason. Next came the pies, flaky and brown and a big plum pudding, dear to the eye. Mrs. A. E. Hulme and Mrs. Matthew Colquhoun had charge of these. The candy table, always attractive, was covered with the sweets so necessary to a Thanksgiving feast and the dispensers of these goodies were Mrs. Alfred McKee and Mrs. John Houghton Flint.

At the head of the vestry was the flower table, filled with blooms, chrysanthemums predominating as typical of the autumn season, and the ladies who had charge of this table were Mrs. Walter Buck, Mrs. Watson and Mrs. H. A. Cutler.

The cake table came next in order, and the plain and fancy specimens of cookery here displayed were good to see. Mrs. B. B. Tuttle and Miss Lucia Merrill were the overseers of this table.

The next table was of practical use in the preparation of the Thanksgiving dinner, aprons of all kinds being here displayed. Mrs. Frank Groat and Mrs. Thomas Allen served the patrons here. The cashier was Mrs. Gladys Jewett, and a tidy sum was realized by the ladies who conducted the sale.

During the afternoon tea was served by Mrs. Chas. W. Henry and Mrs. H. A. Cutler, and the parish house was filled with people who had come to purchase Thanksgiving supplies and enjoy an hour of sociability.

SOCCER

England Wins in Annual Game

England defeated Scotland in the annual soccer classic at Glen Essex yesterday, 3 goals to 1. England opened the scoring early, Butler shooting hard after Rae missed; Smith caught the ball, but dropped with it across the goal line. Shortly afterward Doherty equalized for Scotland, and the game was evenly contested. Just before half time Holt scored from a free kick. Smith again caught the ball but let it slip over his shoulder.

Scotland was forcing the play in the second half when England broke away and Butler again scored, clinching the game for his side. Final: England 3, Scotland 1. Referee, Pat Darcy of Lawrence.

England—Hague; Turton and Higginbotham; Riley, Holt and Kelly; Weston, Taylor, Gillmartin, Butler and Shaw.

Scotland—Smith; Rae and W. Black; Coleman, J. Black and Miller; Wallace, McKay, Page, Doherty and Gordon.

Thistles 3, Hearts 2

The Junior champions won from their rivals on the cricket field Thursday morning 3 goals to 2. The game was interesting throughout. The Hearts outplayed their opponents in the first half and scored two goals, through White and John Nicoll. In the second period the Thistles got together better and beat Craig three times, once by Killacky and twice by Felix Lynch. James Tuson was referee. Time, two 35-minute halves.

Thistles—Sparks; Robb and Croall; Carnathan, J. Lynch and F. Nicoll; Killacky, T. Low, F. Lynch, Caldwell and Porter.

Hearts—Craig; R. Hackney and Hodge; James Nicoll, S. Hackney and John Nicoll; White, W. Low, Barlow, McGlynn and Gunter.

Dr. Dudley and Two Women Charged With the Crime

INDICTMENTS BY GRAND JURY

Bridges Charged With Being Accessory Before the Fact—Perley Pelletier, Alleged "Grave Digger," Not Blamed, While Indictment of Kate Michaud Causes Much Surprise

Dr. Lionel E. Dudley, Alice Pelletier and Kate O. Michaud were indicted for the murder of Mildred Sullivan by the Aroostook county, Me., grand jury. Ambrose Bridges, the alleged sweetheart of the dead girl, was indicted as an accessory before the fact.

The first count in the indictment covers the illegal operation charge, and a third count is also made against Miss Pelletier as an accessory before the fact. The second count formally charges the murder.

No bill was reported against Perley Pelletier, the 17-year-old "grave digger," as he has been called, who it was charged had made the preparations for Mildred Sullivan's burial in the woods.

Although not indicted, Perley Pelletier will undoubtedly be held by the authorities as a vital witness.

It had been intended to report a secret indictment against Ambrose Bridges, but through an error it was made public by the clerk of courts. Deputies at once began a search for Bridges.

There was more than one surprise in the action of the grand jury. More indictments in the case, of lesser weight than for murder, perhaps, were confidently looked for. That Perley Pelletier would be indicted was taken for granted in the popular mind.

Added to these unexpected gaps in the report, which have set the town buzzing, was the unlooked for charging with murder of Kate O. Michaud, the reporter-nurse, whose confession, wrung from her after weeks of effort by County Attorney Archibald, and of mental anguish on her side that has left her a physical wreck, led to the finding of the victim's body, and the murder charges against Dudley and Alice Pelletier.

KILLED BY BANDITS

Manager of Boston Store Sacrifices Life to Save Cash Receipts

Charles J. Merrill, manager of the Charles H. Hitchcock, Inc., drug store, at Boston, was murdered in the discharge of his duty.

He gave his life to save the week's receipts of the store, when facing a loaded revolver of a hold up man; and was immediately shot through the lung.

Reginald C. Pickett, a 16-year-old apprentice, actually covered by the gun which had just mortally wounded Merrill, dodged into a back room, risking a death shot, and called the police. Instantly the bandits grabbed a few dollars from the till and escaped.

GARBAGE MAN WOULD BE SALEM'S MAYOR

Ryan Will Try For Office Against Three Opponents

Salem, Mass., having decided that Mayor Hurley must stand for a vote on recall will have the pleasure now of seeing a lively contest, with Hurley, M. J. O'Keefe, former Mayor Howard and W. J. Ryan, driver of a garbage wagon, as candidates.

Ryan was born in Salem forty-one years ago. He has never before aspired to office. He secured the names necessary for his papers by personal canvass.

The candidate will make his plea for votes to the plain people as one of the plainest of them all. Ryan says he represents a one-man movement, which will gather support like a snowball rolling down hill.

VERA CRUZ EVACUATED

End of American Occupation of the Mexico Port

American troops which have held Vera Cruz have evacuated the city and sailed home, and the Mexican flag is floating again over the ancient fortress of San Juan.

Occupation of the Mexican port, in reprisal for Huerta's insult to the flag at Tampico, has cost the United States more than a score of lives, some in battle and some from disease, and, according to estimates, as much as $10,000,000. But Mexico will be asked to pay no indemnity. Administration officials want the fact to stand out as an added evidence of the disinterested friendship of the United States for her southern neighbor.

General Funston had instructions to turn the city over to none of the Mexican factions and thereby avoid what might be construed as a recognition of one of them.

BAN ON SOCIAL SEASON

Washington Society Disappointed at President's Decision

There will be no social program whatever at the White House this winter. Not a single one of the regular receptions will be held by President Wilson.

While it was known that, because of the death of Mrs. Wilson, the program was in doubt, Washington society had hoped that at least some of the formal dinners and two or three of the receptions would be given.

The president, however, has decided that while he is mourning he will not take any part whatever in social functions.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels cabled Captain Decker of the cruiser Tennessee and Captain Omar of the cruiser North Carolina in the eastern Mediterranean, giving them discretionary authority to deal with emergencies that might arise in protecting American citizens and their interests in Turkey.

The secretary rescinded the order which he sent last week, directing both commanders to take no action whatsoever pending an investigation of the firing on the Tennessee's launch at Smyrna.

Union Thanksgiving Service

The union Thanksgiving service was held at the South church yesterday afternoon at four o'clock. The audience, though rather small, was interested, and representatives from mostly all the churches in town attended, the Free Church Christian Endeavor Society sending a large number.

The Thanksgiving Proclamation was read by Rev. F. A. Wilson, after which the Doxology was sung by the congregation. Rev. M. W. Stackpole led the responsive reading, and the scripture was read by Rev. Newman Matthews of the West church. After the prayer by Rev. C. W. Henry of Christ church and a hymn by the congregation, Rev. W. E. Lombard of the Baptist church delivered a short address, his subject being "Peace." His words had bearing on the European war, the causes of that war and the strenuous endeavors of nations before this time to make for peace. He said that peace could and would never come until the lust for power and gain had been thrown down and the thirsting for power had been overcome. He said that the nations in their struggles, each for supremacy, had overlooked the teachings of Christ, and not until Christ was again recognized as Lord and Master of us all would we have universal peace.

A collection was taken for the District Nurse Association, and the meeting closed by the congregation joining in a hymn.

Obituary

MRS. ROBERT STRINGER

Mrs. Susie Shaw Stringer, for many years a resident of Andover, died at her home, 34 Freeman street, Somerville, Saturday evening, November 21, after a lingering illness, aged 33 years 9 months. Prayers were said at the home at 11 o'clock Tuesday and the body was brought to Andover Tuesday afternoon, services being held at Christ church at 1.30 o'clock. Rev. Charles W. Henry officiated and interment took place in Spring Grove cemetery. The deceased leaves a husband and one son, Robert, to mourn her loss.

ABBOTT VILLAGE

George Mitchell has returned to his home on Shawshen road after spending the summer in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. David Low and daughter Lillian, of Brighton, spent the weekend at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Low on Cuba street.

William Haddon has removed his family from North Main street to Essex street.

With the removal of the old red blacksmith shop a few weeks ago and the recent razing of the old square block that stood on the other side of the bridge, Abbott Village centre is rapidly losing its old familiar appearance. The absence of these buildings will scarcely be regretted, while the improvement, by way of a wider bridge, will be a welcome one to the villagers.

Miss Margaret Sullivan of Howarth court was tendered a tin shower last Friday evening at the home of her fiancé, John Carney, in Methuen. Miss Sullivan's friends had gathered a great assortment of useful articles and the occasion was a pleasant surprise. Refreshments were served by Mr. Carney's sisters and the good time extended until a late hour.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. George Petrie on Thanksgiving morning.

MAKING OF A STOVE

Interesting Lecture Given at South Church Men's Club
by W. H. Perkins of Boston

A very interesting illustrated lecture was given by William H. Perkins of the Walker & Pratt Manufacturing Company of Boston before the Men's Club of the South Church on last Friday evening. The vestry was well filled by the club members and their friends, and much interest was manifested by the audience over the talk and the views shown.

A range is one of the most important articles which is found in the modern household, and in his talk Mr. Perkins showed a side of it which was not familiar to those present, namely: the complete cycle of operation gone through in its manufacture, starting with the ore in the ground and following that same ore to the finished product. The various properties of iron have given it uses so innumerable that, outside of the air we breathe and the water we drink, this metal has become perhaps the most indispensable of all substances. In the last year alone there was mined throughout the known world over one hundred million tons of iron ore, of which over sixty-five million tons was produced in the United States of America. The greatest producing region in this country today is located around the shore of Lake Superior in the States of Michigan and Minnesota. For the Mesaba range, which was the particular one illustrated, the shipping port is Duluth. The ore docks of this port are among the most wonderful in the world, double railroad tracks extend over the tops of the ore docks from which the cars drop their contents directly into the ore pockets, from which pockets the ore is discharged by gravity into the holds of the ore boats. The ore is handled entirely automatically, electric hoisting buckets unloading the vessel, piling the ore in the large stock yard which runs along the length of the dock. From this yard the ore is transferred into a series of pockets which run between the yard and furnaces. From these pockets it is dropped by gravity into a larry or distributing car that runs on a trestle underneath them, and from this larry car it is dumped into a skip or hoist car that carries the charge to the top of the furnace. The charge consists of alternate layers of limestone and iron ore, it taking two tons of ore, one and one-third tons of coke and one-third of a ton of limestone to make a ton of pig iron. To complete the combustion some twenty-five hundred tons of air a day are forced into the furnace, at a very high temperature and under considerable pressure. The iron as it melts runs down to the bottom of the furnace from whence it is drawn off every four hours. The cast house floor is a bed of sand in which are molded forms and runners through which the molten iron flows. The shape of these forms is analogous to a litter of little pigs feeding, hence the name "Pig Iron." The pigs are picked up by a travelling crane, carried to an hydraulic pig breaker, and broken into two or three pieces, after which they are loaded into cars for shipment to the stove foundries. This completed the ore end of the subject.

The first step in the building of a range is to make a complete pattern stove in wood. After the design of the range has been laid out by the designers and the plans and dimensions laid out on paper, it becomes the part of the pattern maker to evolve the real stove. That this is the most important part of a stove foundry, you will appreciate if you would realize that sometimes it may be a year from the time the stove is started until it is ready for the market. The wooden pattern stove completed, the next step is to make another pattern stove, this time in iron. This is necessary because the wood patterns are not practical for daily use, the dampness of the sand causing them to warp and swell. The iron pattern stove completed the iron patterns are sent into the Foundry for daily use, while the wooden patterns are filed away in a special brick storage building. In the Foundry "flasks" are used to make the molds, not the glass kind, but wooden ones; that is, wooden boxes without tops or bottoms. Into these the sand is packed to make the molds. Common flasks are in two parts, the novel or bottom part and the cope which, of course, means cover. By means of the pictures which showed the various operations gone through in making the mold we were enabled to see in detail and in a manner which we could understand this interesting process. The number of flasks which a molder can put up in a day varies from two or three of the largest ones to some fifty or sixty of the smaller ones.

Very few people realize the important part the sand plays in the production of perfect castings. The sand is especially selected for molding, most of it coming from the vicinity of Albany, New York.

Iron, unlike all other metals, is rarely found and never used in its pure form, but always in combination with other elements, such as carbon, silicon, phosphorus, manganese and the like. The proportion of these elements present in the mixture have widely varying effects, consequently the chemical analysis must be known of every brand of iron charged into the Foundry cupola.

The next step is the cleaning of the castings. This is done by packing them in revolving tumbling barrels, the castings being packed tightly so that they will not move themselves and yet so there is space between them. Into this space are thrown small bits of iron resembling jackstones; the barrel is covered and then revolved until every vestige of sand has been removed from them, the sand being drawn off by powerful exhaust fans into a large separator. From the cleaning room the castings are taken to the casting rooms, first carefully inspected for any defects and afterwards piled away in large bins provided for the purpose.

The process of assembling together the various parts of a stove is a two-fold process, mounting and fitting, and is a very interesting one, due perhaps to the amazing speed and accuracy with which both these men work. The moulder takes the main parts of the stove, and starting with the main bottom builds up a complete skeleton range. The fitter takes this skeleton range fitting to it the other pieces, such as the shelves and doors which need special fitting. From the fitter the range is taken to the blacking and packing department, where it is packed all ready for shipment. In handling these goods from the packing room to the warehouse an electric truck is used which has many advantages.

In closing this talk, Mr. Perkins showed curious other parts of the Foundry, the machine shop, engine and boiler rooms, the last including the mammoth fire pump with a capacity of one thousand gallons per minute. All the water used throughout the plant is pumped from an artesian well four hundred and ten feet deep into a one hundred and eighty thousand gallon storage tank. Two thirds of the capacity of this tank is always held in reserve in case of fire as the fire protection throughout the plant includes everything accepted by the most modern fire practice; in fact, some thirty thousand dollars alone is invested in this protection, a protection which is surely as much of an asset to the Consumer as it is to the manufacturers, insuring at all times an ability to obtain repairs.

The few pictures shown of the grounds were exceedingly interesting as the lawns are kept up in a most attractive manner, being shaded with fine large shade trees and decorated with many hundreds of shrubs. This Foundry is the result of over fifty years' experience. A very cordial invitation was given to visit the Foundry and see in detail the making of a range.

Maine "Sardines"

Maine is expected to sardine the entire United States during the war in Europe. It has a habit of selling us $2,000,000 worth a year, and that is about twice as much as the French send us each season when there is no war. Norway has been supplying us about $500,000 worth annually. The war has shut out these supplies, so far as known to officials at Washington thus far, and Maine is called on to double up its sardining and do a tremendous business. Dr. Hugh M. Smith, United States Commissioner of Fisheries, says Maine can do it all right and not spoil the water runs of herring, which he says make as good sardines as anything caught on the other side of the Atlantic. He recommends that Maine take a little more pains in handling the small fish, to keep them whole for the packing, and boil them in a little better oil than the average, but otherwise the industry in Maine is all right. The Europeans evidently catch the mites of fish in softer nets and carry them more carefully, and they hurry the process after catching a good deal more than Maine sardiners do, and therefore keep the real fish flavor intact. Maine may be able, with this advice, to recover its prosperity gait, which was slowed down a good deal by Democratic legislation at Washington.—Worcester Telegram.

Appeal to a "Christian" Nation

Our neighbor nations are in a mighty life-and-death struggle while we await the issue. We bemoan our small discomforts and financial loss and our papers and public men stand nobly (?) by and urge us to seize their trade now that they are at war. To stand by and watch cold-blooded murder in Europe as we are now doing and plan and figure how we can benefit as a nation, is too low for the lowest beast. Help them in their suffering and pain! Help their widows and struggling orphans and keep them from starving, instead of planning to take away the little they will have left. Do not rob the dying! Prove for once a Christian nation exists on earth.—Letter to Editor of New York Times

Strictly Neutral

Isn't it glorious that while we are sending gifts to the orphans of Germany and Austria we are sending their enemies enough war material to kill a million more fathers? Isn't this in keeping with all our "peace prayers"? Not only perjury and murder, but blasphemy, I call it.—From Letter to Editor of New York Tribune

The threat made by the board of trustees to close down the Industrial School unless the necessary additional appropriation to maintain the school was forthcoming failed to move the municipal council to action when the matter was brought before the regular weekly session Monday. Assurances were given by Acting Mayor Hannagan, however, that sufficient money would be provided for the Industrial School to meet any expense incurred before the monthly bills became due for payment.

The clothing store of Israel Goff at 479 Common street was entered some time after 11 o'clock Saturday night and a large quantity of wearing apparel was stolen. Entrance was effected by taking a light of glass out of a rear window and unfastening the catch. Among the articles taken were one black coat, three overcoats, a pair of trousers, one box of black stockings and a pair of shoes, which were not mates. The break was reported to the police and an investigation is being made.

PUNCHARD WINS ANNUAL GAME

Exeter High Badly Beaten on the Playstead Last Saturday Afternoon, Giving Local Boys Lead in the Series

The annual football game between Punchard High and Exeter High was played on the Playstead before a big crowd of enthusiastic supporters last Saturday afternoon and was easily won by the local boys 27 to 0. The team as a whole out-played their opponents and showed that Coach Lovely had, this year, developed one of the best teams that Punchard has produced for many years. The line was strong and well balanced while the back field possessed abundant power and speed which wore down the line of the Exeter team with the result that long gains were made by Cates, Wendell and Larkin.

The field was in wretched condition for football, a thin coating of snow and ice making the footing uncertain and causing the backs on both teams to have trouble in getting started. It is quite probable that under different conditions Punchard would have had a larger score as time after time while carrying the ball the men had to slow up and feel their way cautiously in fear of slipping on the ice.

It is a difficult task to compare the individual work of the players and to give one more praise than the other, as every man played his part nicely and fitted into the machine of a perfectly developed team. There were flashes of brilliancy shown however, and it seems necessary to mention briefly a few of the most important plays of the game. Kendall, the Punchard right half back, made two of the longest runs of the game, one of 90 yards and the other of 55 yards, and both resulted in touchdowns. The longer run was made through left tackle and was accomplished after the line had made a hole for him and the secondary line of defence had been successfully boxed. He cleverly eluded the full backs and crossed the Exeter goal-line. The line bucking which enabled Cates to gain many yards was one of the notable features. Time after time he tore through the line for gains of from two to ten yards. He hit the line hard and even when tackled managed to pull himself along a few feet, making the most of the play before being downed. Larkin, the full-back, came in for his share of the glory of the victory. His punting was especially good and Exeter had a difficult time in holding his kicks. Robinson ran the team well and found the weaknesses in the Exeter line where he sent the backs repeatedly. His one fault was in using the line over shift play too often. This play was effective during the early part of the game but when Exeter learned the motive of the shift they set themselves for it and succeeded in stopping the play frequently.

In the line Noyes put up a great game but would have been more effective had he played lower. His weight and strength helped open up big holes for the line plungers and on the defence he broke through many times and stopped the runners before they started. Watson, the sturdy right guard, and H. Larkin, at left guard, were brilliant line men. They were in every play and did a great deal toward bringing victory to Punchard. The Exeter backs found their positions strongly fortified and before the game was very old resorted to plays that would not draw these men into the scrimmage. The tackles, G. Abbott and G. Brown, performed their work quietly and well. They tackled hard and followed the ball cleverly. They managed to be into every play and in opening up holes for their backs to go through they succeeded wonderfully. Cronin, Allicon and Lawson, the end men, played their positions exceedingly well. They were fast down the field under punts and were good with the forward pass. The Exeter backs found it hard to gain ground around the ends and some clever tackling by these men featured the contest.

For the Exeter team, G. Scammon, Flanagan and McLane played well but these men were unable to shine brilliantly owing to the strength of the Punchard line. G. Scammon made some good gains, however, but his team was never in a scoring position and the flashes of speed shown by the team were brought suddenly to a halt when the local boys would present a solid wall in defence. The fact must not be lost sight of that the visitors were out-weighted and against these odds they put up a plucky fight.

A word of praise should be given to the supporters of the Punchard team, who under the leadership of Manager Duggan cheered the players and did not forget to give the Exeter boys a round. The teams lined up as follows:

FIREMEN ENTERTAIN AT TOWN HALL

Forty-third Annual Ball of Local Company Held Thanks giving Eve. Many Attended from Out-of-Town and Enjoyed Dancing Till Early Morning

The 43rd annual ball of the Fire Engine Company took place on Wednesday evening about three hundred people being in attendance. The Adelphi orchestra furnished music for the dancing which lasted until one o'clock Thanksgiving morning, and they also played several selections during the time when the people were gathering.

The entertainment preceding the dancing consisted of selections in the French Canadian dialect by James B. Thrasher, who was thoroughly versed in this amusing and rather tongue-twisting patois. He gave several readings, both serious and comic, and his actions were typical of the gesture-loving people across the border.

Dancing was started at nine o'clock and the floor was soon covered by moving figures who had come to while away a few hours at a favorite pastime.

As the new dances are not allowed in the Town hall there was a lack of the enthusiasm that used to be prevalent at these annual events, but the music was good and the older dances will ever be popular, especially among the older people.

A large number came from Lawrence and among those from Andover were noted the following:

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cole, Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm McTernan, Mr. and Mrs. George Pearce, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Donaldson, Mr. and Mrs. John Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morse, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bowman, Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Pomeroy, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Manning, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Buchan, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith, Misses Edith Whitman, Edith Smith, Anne Coleman, Anna Holt, Helen Holt, Emma Holt, Ruth Cates, Myrtle Dumont, Marguerite O'Sullivan, Bessie O'Sullivan, Alice McTernan, Helen Collins, Florence Mears, Elizabeth Gordon, Gladys Ralph, Edna Ward, Mrs. Thomas Rhodes, Mrs. Frank E. R. C. O. A. ENTERTAINMENT

First Concert in Series Will be Given in Town Hall Next Friday Evening by the Hussar Quartet

The first entertainment of the R. C. O. A. course for the winter will be given next Friday evening in the town hall when the Hussar Male Quartet will come before the Andover public for the first time. They are young men who have made a hit wherever they have entertained and are sure to be well received by the local audience. The following description gives some interesting details.

THE HUSSAR QUARTET.
As the name Hussar indicates, the program of this company echoes the life, the vigor and the dash of the German soldier. The military uniforms are of the Hussar type and decidedly becoming and full of splendor.

In the program there is also an informal recital of some of the classics presented in evening dress, as well as a fifteen minute suggestion of American college life, given with the action and in the garb of the athletic field.

At times rollicking songs and stories are introduced. The members of this quartet are ambitious, manly and musical fellows, with all the enthusiasm necessary to present a program in which there are no tiresome waits.

In addition to vocal work they present instrumental selections on the cornet, piano, slide trombone, euphonium and mellaphone.

Andover A. A. Easy Winners

The Clippers of Lawrence were defeated on the playstead Thanksgiving afternoon by the Andover A. A., by the score of 19 to 0. A large crowd assembled to witness the game as the Clippers had been heralded as a very strong organization, but they were outclassed in every department and made but one first down during the contest. The field was in miserable condition, being slippery and covered with pools of water, and this spoiled a number of good plays which would have added to the score. The playing was confined to the Clippers' territory almost entirely, and the local goal was never in danger. The touchdowns were scored by E. Collins after a run through the line for 45 yards; by Chester Morse, who grabbed the ball on a fumble and had a clear field, and the last from a forward pass Hardy to Towne, Cates taking the ball over.

The biggest gains for the visitors were presented by Umpire Reardon, who unaccountably penalized Andover twice fifteen yards for alleged hurdling, decisions which were most ridiculous, according to the rules of the game. The Andover A. A. had a very fast bunch of players and the fact that they had had no practice previous to the game makes their victory all the more creditable. The most outstanding player in the line was Towne at right end whose tackling was as good as any seen on any football field in Andover this season. O'Connor also played a star game at end, and Hardy, Gray and Donovan were strong on defense and offense. The team was well served by its backfield and the quartet worked well together in spite of ground difficulties. C. Lindsay gaining many yards by line plunges while E. Collins' dodging and twisting made him a hard man to stop. E. O'Connell got away with several nice runs and Cates gained consistently.

The teams lined up as follows:

At the First Yawn

The great interest taken in the recent naval review at Portsmouth recalls a remark once made by Lady Galway.

"English people," she said, "require a tremendous amount to awaken their interest, and when one is speaking in public it is sometimes very difficult to hold the attention of one's audience. I have one plan, however, which never fails whenever I see my audience beginning to get dull."

"What is that?" she was asked.
"At the very first yawn," Lady Galway replied, "I begin to talk about the British navy, no matter what I've been talking about before. That wakes them up!"—Pearson's Weekly.

POCKETBOOK

By HOLLAND.

YOU can insure your pocketbook by reading the advertisements in this paper. The manufacturers of the most reliable goods and the merchants who sell them are telling you what is best, what is cheapest, what is most desirable and where it can be bought.

They know what they are talking about, and they would not talk in such an expensive manner unless they knew their words would bear inspection. They want to save money for you because by so doing they make a permanent customer of you.

It takes little time and little trouble to read the advertisements and few occupations will pay better. The returns are immediate and the profits are in cash.
